The Slade Audio Club to Release the Third in a Series of Limited-Edition Artist Audio Works

On June 6th, The Slade Audio Club will release their third limited-edition CD, titled Channels. This latest album features artists Sara Bjarland and Naheed Raza. Both artists will be graduating from The Slade School of Fine Art postgraduate program from media and sculpture departments, respectively. The release will be available for purchase online and at the private view of the postgraduate's final show at the Slade.

The Slade Audio Club was started by artists Richard Bevan and Andrew Ranville with aid of a project grant awarded by The Slade School of Fine Art. One of the primary roles of the Audio Club is to function as a record label, but not simply for music. The label has scheduled a "season" of limited-edition releases which celebrate many different types of audio works from selected Slade artists. Each release comes with special packaging designed by the artists featured. Currently each release is limited to an edition of 50.

Information About Release TSAC003 - Channels

The third release from The Slade Audio Club features artists Sara Bjarland and Naheed Raza. Through the entirety of the album Bjarland and Raza alternate tracks, shifting the listener between unique aural landscapes. Ingrained in the compositions is each artists' creative, working process. The pop of a plastic bubble, the crash of a pile of glass, the simple snip of a piece of string are examples of the sound that reverently tell of the artists' intention of it's making. Each focus, each fracture embody those thoughtful and often playful observations, but at the same time also offer something much more ambiguous and challenging when presented as a whole. Challenge aside, Channels remains a interesting and entertaining sonic journal which provides listeners a glimpse into the workings and wonderings of Bjarland and Raza.
